

Taking Flight at AERO: French Watchmaker Aquilon & Co Unveils Its Debut Aviation-Inspired Collection

Born in the heart of the French Alps in Grenoble, Aquilon & Co is a dynamic new watchmaking house ready to make its mark at this year's AERO exhibition. Founded by Gaspar, a lifelong aviation enthusiast, the brand has successfully captured the pure essence of flight, translating it into an elegant line of timepieces designed for the modern aviator.

Following two years of meticulous research and development, Aquilon & Co is proud to introduce its inaugural collection. The brand is presenting a comprehensive range of 12 distinct automatic watches, spearheaded by their flagship model, the ALTI. Each timepiece pays a refined homage to the world of aeronautics without compromising on everyday elegance.

Understanding the rigorous demands of the cockpit, Aquilon & Co has carefully selected materials that resonate deeply with the aerospace industry. The timepieces feature robust yet refined cases crafted from titanium, high-grade stainless steel, and high-tech ceramic. To ensure optimal legibility and resilience under any conditions, every watch is topped with a scratch-resistant sapphire crystal.

Beating at the heart of these flight instruments is a proven Japanese automatic caliber, a movement renowned worldwide for its unwavering performance, precision, and exceptional robustness.

Aquilon & Co is not just making watches; they are crafting wearable tributes to the skies. Gaspar and his team invite all aviation professionals, pilots, and enthusiasts at AERO to discover where French horological elegance meets the uncompromising spirit of aviation.

Come and discover the ALTI and the full collection at Booth A1 - 113.
